Part 2: Extrovert Types

Last week I introduced the introvert types, for me, a more familiar area. Today I will introduce you to the 8 extrovert types. Though they might be more in the foreground, comfortable in large groups, and expressing their feelings, they are not all the same.

Like I said, there are 8 extroverted personality types consisting of, again, 4 letters. Every type begins with the 'E' which stands for 'Extroversion'. Then there is a distinction made between 'Intuition (N)' and 'Sensing (S)', which tells you something about the way you prefer to take in information. 'Thinking (T)' and 'Feeling (F)' tells you something about which way you prefer to make decisions. 'Perceiving (P)' and 'Judging (J)' indicates the way you prefer to live your outer life.

Each personality type can be broken down into an 'Assertive (A)' type and a 'Turbulent (T)' type, which are represented by the last letter of the acronym. Assertive types are calmer and worry less, while turbulent types are more perfectionists and sensitive to how others see them.

ENTJ-A / ENTJ-T Commander

If there is one group of people that are born leaders, it is the commanders. Their strengths are being efficient, inspiring, self-confident, strong-willed, and strategic thinkers. However, they tend to be stubborn, intolerant, and impatient. Commanders take the lead in relationships as well and they take their relationships very seriously. They expect a lot from their friendships. For example, they seek friends with whom they can share their passion for meaningful discussions. It might be no surprise, but commanders are most likely to become leaders of an organization or a team.

ENTP-A / ENTP-T Debater

As the name gives away, debaters find pleasure in debating. They are quick thinkers, brainstormers, knowledgeable, and charismatic. Still, they can be insensitive, overly argumentative, and intolerant. In relationships debaters find growth very important and they always think of things that move the relationship forward. Debaters respect friends who tell them they're wrong when they're wrong and not friends who agree with them just for the sake of it. They don't like to manage other people or to be managed themselves. Lawyers, psychologists or sales representatives are jobs that debaters fit.

ENFJ-A / ENFJ-T Protagonist

Protagonists find a purpose in having a positive impact on other people in life. They are reliable, altruistic, passionate, and charismatic. However, they can be unrealistic, too idealistic, and empathetic, and intense. In relationships, protagonists' standards are high. Therefore, when they find a connection with someone, they have a deep appreciation for this relationship. Protagonists find it very important to connect with others and put a lot of effort into staying close with people they care about. They find it important to help others in careers such as human resources, social work, teaching, coaching, health care, and so on.

ENFP-A / ENFP-T Campaigner

Campaigners stand out among people and are fun to be around. They are curious, enthusiastic, festive, and good-natured. But they can also be people-pleasing, unfocused, disorganized, and too optimistic. Warmth, passion, and openness are things that campaigners bring to a romantic relationship. They would rather share their life with somebody, than be single. In friendships, campaigners have a lot to offer because they are both up for fun times and deep discussions about all sorts of topics. They are very generous and therefore campaigners sometimes get the feeling that they care more about their friends than the other way around. A job in social media, communications, human health, and environmental science will fit campaigners.

ESTJ-A / ESTJ-T Executive

Executives' goal is to bring people together. They are dedicated, loyal, honest, and real organizers. Every now and then they can be inflexible and judgmental and struggle to communicate their emotions. Executives won't play games in relationships. They are honest and straightforward from the start. Therefore, their relationships are often very stable. In friendships, they are most comfortable with people sharing mutual activities. Career paths such as auditors, financial officers, and administrators suit this type well.

ESFJ-A / ESFJ-T Consul

Consuls gladly share their lives with others by opening their homes to people from their surroundings. They are warm, good at connecting with others, and have a strong sense of duty. But they can be inflexible and vulnerable to criticism. Consuls find the security and the feeling of stability that comes with relationships very important. The fact that consuls often look for a large circle of friends does not mean that they put less time into individual friendships. This type finds work in medical care, social work, teaching, and counseling.

EXPLORERS

ESTP-A / ESTP-T Entrepreneur

Well-known entrepreneurs are Eddie Murphy and Madonna. They are far from shy and love to be the center of attention. Being bold, practical, original, and sociable is nothing new for them. But they can also be impatient, unstructured, and insensitive. In relationships, the here and now is most important to entrepreneurs, making them unpredictable but exciting partners. Because of their easy-going and charming character, they are quite popular. Making sales, marketing, acting are all great fits for this type but being a paramedic, officer, or freelancer can also be an entrepreneur's purpose.

ESFP-A / ESFP-T Entertainer

Entertainers like to share their spontaneous moments and excitement with everyone around them. They are bold, observant, and have great people skills. Still, they can be sensitive and get quickly bored. Entertainers are living in the moment and enjoy their relationships for as long as there is enjoyment to be found. One of the most important things for entrepreneurs is to feel alive and they love to share that feeling with their friends. With their excitement for activities, they are good event planners and tour guides, but their great people skills make them also good counselors, personal coaches, and nurses.
